Thanks Ken!

For the past six years, Ken Beaudrie has been a one-man Communications Committee. He has produced the INC Connections newsletter, and also has sent out email news blasts of pertinent items to INC subscribers during the week. Ken resigned from this post effective November 1. We wish to thank Ken for his wonderful contributions to INC and his dedication to getting information out to members in a timely and sensitive manner. We are happy to say he has agreed to remain as our Membership Chair!

INC Meets With Denver’s New Mayor

Several INC members had an audience with Denver’s new mayor, Michael B. Hancock, on October 10 at the CHUN offices. INC Chair, Steve Nissen, began the meeting by presenting a brief overview of INC as a representative of 100 member RNOs. An INC planning committee had presented a short agenda to the Mayor prior to the meeting. The agenda covered three broad areas.

1. The discussion of bottom-up vs. top-down participation by INC and RNO members in City programs, projects and plans for more cost effective, efficient and overall better outcomes.

Steve introduced the communication topic by saying we are very encouraged by the philosophy as stated in the campaign that discussion and planning starts at the bottom within the community and it goes up.

INC has a broad base of community involvement. There has been an erosion of neighborhood representation to City board, committees and task forces. INC would like to see appointments of community representatives to these areas; specifically appointments from INC or as an alternative, the appointees are given the directive to report back to INC and gather information from the INC.

There was also a discussion of City department managers meeting with INC committee chairs to discuss issues and concerns. Decisions are often made before citizens are engaged in planning and design. INC would like to be involved in the early stages.

The INC representatives who met with the Mayor felt he supported this concept regarding more community representation.

Mayor Hancock advised he had appointed Derek Okubo as the director of Human Rights and Community Partnership (HRCP) Office and that Derek will take a greater role in working with the RNOs. Currently, the community connection is more through Community Planning and Development.

Derek Okubo will come to a future EC meeting to be determined. Anthony Aragon is the director of boards and commissions.

2. Review of 311 and citizen/city communication to eliminate distance, facilitate interaction and create better access, efficiency and good will.

It has not evolved as the original intent. We talked about the frustrations and problems related to getting contact information for key individuals in departments, getting through to 311 lines and getting resolution through this system. Michael Sapp was looking into make the process more efficient and also how to track calls logged in to 311. Mayor Hancock agreed there are inefficiencies with 311 and suggested budget restraints related to having enough staff may be a factor impacting efficiencies. The Mayor reinforced that the City employees work for the people, and they are responsible to work with the citizens.

3. Work in partnership with the city to facilitate Neighborhood Conferences.

The Mayor and Michael Sapp shared their plan for staging community forums. The Mayor will bring department heads to these forums to present a few topics and also take questions from those attending in order to open forums beyond the planned topics. The forums will also include breakout sessions to encourage dialogs that matter.

The Mayor is also going to require his Cabinet to spend a day in different locations in the community to meet, work and answer questions from individuals in the community.
An open letter from Denver Water

Water is a precious resource here in the West, much too precious to use just once.

Denver Water is charged with securing water for our customers now and in the future. To help ensure a reliable supply, we have a three-pronged approach in place to meet those needs: conservation, supply development and recycled water.

Our nationally recognized conservation program continues to thrive, and we have put in place a number of small-scale supply projects to help develop additional supply. But a lesser-known part of Denver Water’s commitment to using water efficiently is our recycled water system.

Denver Water operates the largest recycled water system in Colorado. Our system treats used water and reuses it for irrigation and industrial purposes, freeing up potable water for households and businesses throughout the city. Various places around Denver, including the Denver Zoo, Xcel Energy, golf courses and parks use recycled water.

Although there have been allegations that recycled water is unsafe, in 2002 the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency conclusively disproved these allegations. You can learn more about this topic at Denver Recycled Water

Here are the facts about our recycled water system, the water and its uses:

- Recycled water is regulated by the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment, and ours meets the requirements for the highest quality class in the state. Denver Water has never violated any of these standards.
- Denver Water’s recycled water comes from the Metro Wastewater Reclamation District’s treatment plant. This water is treated again at Denver Water’s recycling plant before it is distributed through separate pipes used specifically for recycled water to keep it from contacting your drinking water.
- Our recycled water must meet internal and customer standards that are more stringent that what regulations dictate, so we treat this water above and beyond what is required.
- Denver Water plays an active role nationally in recycled water research and innovation.

Recycled water is the right water for the right use and will enable us to serve the growing water needs in Denver. Information about Denver Water’s recycled water system is enclosed. For more information visit: www.denverwater.org/waterquality/recycledwater or call 303-628-7010.

Note: INC has provided this voice as a public service. INC neither endorses or nor validates this statement provided by Denver Water. INC encourages the public to do their own research on the issue.

FROM THE CHAIR

We have had some changes at INC lately as you can see from this newsletter. Ken Beaudrie resigned as editor after six-plus years of faithfully compiling The Connection. A generous thank-you is extended to Ken from all of us at INC for all those years of dedication. He has committed to continue as our Membership Chair. Jane Lorimer, At-Large Executive Committee Member, has generously stepped forward to serve as Editor on an interim basis.

Please note the story on P.O. Box change. We no longer find it feasible to have two P.O. boxes. The new P.O. Box number is 300684 with the same zip code of 80218.

The Executive Committee recently arranged for a meeting with Mayor Hancock and representatives met with him on October 10. INC expressed the critical need in having greater participation of citizens and RNOs in having their rightful place at the table when making public policy. The mayor committed to working with INC in facilitating Neighborhood Conferences. He expressed his respect for neighborhoods and the value of citizen contribution in his efforts as he forges ahead to make Denver even a greater city. Our sincere exchange with the mayor offers greater participation in the democratic process in Denver and promises renewed opportunities for INC and neighborhoods.

I trust those of you who attended the Mayor’s Community Forum on October 22 found it to be helpful. Our appreciation is extended to the mayor for this grassroots opportunity of involvement. The mayor has indicated there will be more such forums. I trust all will step up to this great opportunity and participate as this is a great place to address issues affecting your neighborhood, and neighborhoods citywide.

At the Delegation Meeting on November 12 we will have Julie Carlton of the Denver Energy Challenge presenting information on outreach, education and assistance programs available in Denver. Participants in the program save energy and money while reducing greenhouse gases. This information could be helpful to many during this economic squeeze.

INC Co-sponsors School Board Candidate Forums

In October, INC coordinated two election forums in preparation for the November 1 election in sponsorship with Denver Decides, a non-profit organization committed to accessible, transparent elections.

Denver Decides is a partnership composed of the Denver League of Women Voters, Inter-Neighborhood Cooperation, and Denver 8 TV. Denver Decides and Denver 8 TV bring voters information about the Denver election process and the candidates through community events and access through www.denverdecides.org website and on television. Partnership members include the League of Women Voters of Denver and the Inter-

The October 1 forum was held at Denver Community Church on S. Washington Street in Denver and was also co-hosted by INC members West Washington Park Neighborhood Association and Capitol Hill United Neighbors. The October 12 forum took place at Merritt Memorial United Methodist Church and was co-hosted by Sloan’s Lake Citizens Group.

Delegate Meeting Recap October 2011

In place of the monthly Delegate meeting, INC partnered with Denver Decides to conduct election forums on October 1 and October 12.

INC Membership

In case you missed it, membership dues were increased for 2012 to $40.00 for RNO members and $25.00 for Associate Members. Patron membership for both categories remains at $75 a year. At mid-year, the dues are lowered by 50%.

This increase was made to accommodate rising costs to manage the operations, dinner and other activities that INC supports.

We used to have all of the City Councilpersons as members of INC. This year, we have only two: Councilwoman Jeanne Robb and Councilwoman Peggy Lehmann. We’d like to ask RNO’s to encourage their City Council representatives to become Associate Members.

Membership Changes: Please send changes for member, president or delegate data to the membership chair, Ken Beaudrie, by email to kbeaudrie@totalspeed.net
Committee Corner

INC has many special interest committees who meet to address areas of specific importance to the Denver community. The following reports were submitted for recent activities. Please see www.denverinc.org for committee postings and calendar of meetings.

DDD: Dollar Dictionary Drive has about $1,000.00 remaining funds after buying the books and supplies for distribution. Macy’s Community Shopping Day is on November 12. See Steve for the Macy coupons which are selling for $10 (we keep that money). A survey was distributed to all of the schools concerning the use and effectiveness of the Dollar Dictionary Drive. Twenty-six schools responded. See publicity concerning the survey on our website.

Website/Communications There are technical issues with the web site that are being addressed and the INC banner will be updated to reflect approved logo changes.

Library Committee is on hold.

Safety Committee The City Detention Center is a model program that has received numerous awards. There are interesting opportunities to learn about the work of law enforcement through the Citizen’s Academy and Ride Along programs.

Transportation has been working on the I-70 corridor which involves federal highways and CDOT. INC is not taking a stance on this issue because it involves Federal funding.

Zoning & Planning Committee
The INC ZAP Committee met on October 15. Tom Downey, who has been the Director of the Excise and Licenses Department since July, met for the second time with the Committee. He indicated that his top priority was to provide good service to customers and stakeholders, including neighborhood groups. The Department deals with 183 types of licenses. Those that most affect neighborhoods are licenses for liquor establishments, cabarets and medical marijuana facilities. He indicated that the Department’s workload has skyrocketed” during the last 2 years due to medical marijuana.

He took considerable time to explain his proposed policy changes, which are still evolving, related to boundaries for the “designated neighborhood,” within which residents and owners and managers of businesses are allowed to sign petitions and testify at hearings and within which registered neighborhood organizations must be notified of hearings. He is consulting with technical city people to devise boundaries, probably circular, that can be administered easily through the city’s Geographic Information System. He hopes that this will address numerous problems regarding deficient notifications that have been called to his attention. Many ZAP members encouraged him not to make the boundaries much wider, which would enable paid petitioners for applicants to obtain more signatures from people who do not live close to proposed establishments. Mr. Downey also said that he hopes to have all licensing processes web-enabled within a year, so that applicants for licenses do not have to come downtown. He also said that he thinks Good Neighbor Agreements are important and he will attach conditions to licenses if they are clear and enforceable. He is working internally to review all liquor policies and will put them back on the Department’s website when finalized. He also said that City Council is considering whether the ownership and location of medical marijuana facilities should be transferable.

Michael Sapp, the Mayor’s Neighborhood Liaison, encouraged ZAP members to attend the Mayor’s Community Conference on October 22 at West High School.

Savannah Jameson, staff for the Landmark Preservation Commission, and Alice Gilbertson of Historic Denver updated the Committee about their citywide survey of historic resources, called Discover Denver. A pilot project to identify and survey 2 neighborhoods and one theme (for example, streetcar suburbs), is just getting underway, funded by a grant from the State Historic Fund. - Michael Henry

Trustees award $1.7 million to aid South Platte

DENVER — The Natural Resource Trustees of Colorado announced today that they have awarded $1.7 million in natural resource damage funds to the Greenway Foundation on behalf of the Overland Park Neighborhood Association to help restore water quality, habitat and riparian areas along a two-mile stretch of the South Platte River in south Denver.

The award of the funds will be contingent on the Greenway Foundation procuring matching funds for its projects at Grant Frontier Park, Pasquinel’s Landing and Overland Park. The projects are expected to start in roughly two years time.

“The Overland Park Neighborhood Association deserves much of the credit for working to put together a plan to restore the section of the South Platte River.”

Colorado received $1.5 million when it settled its natural resource damages case against the Shattuck Chemical Company in 2002. Since that time, the money has earned nearly $200,000 in interest, bringing the total amount available for restoring natural resources near the Shattuck site to $1.7 million.

Robin is not satisfied with the status quo in some matters of administrative policy. It was cited by the PARC Committee that Denver Parks and Recreation Notification and Civic engagement (“public engagement”) is a major concern.

Naomi reported that she does not track Robin’s issues, but that Robin is not satisfied with the status quo in some matters of administrative policy. We discussed how PARC and INC can interface best with Robin. We cited Denver Parks and Recreation Notification and Civic engagement (“public engagement”) as a major concern, and gave background information on attempts to create policy which includes community participation from the instigation of DPR projects and policies that affect neighborhoods. We hope that the new administration of DPR will recognize and respect the considerable, insight, experience and knowledge RNO participants can share.

Jerry Trumbule shared his educational, academic and professional background and his association with Adrienne Anderson in her work regarding water pollution stemming from the former Superfund Site, the Lowry Landfill. He encouraged reading “Lowdown on Lowry” at Scribd.com, and visiting his blog, http://denverdirect.blogspot.com/ where information about Ms. Anderson is archived. He distributed a number of reports to PARC members. By regulation the recycled water used in some Denver parks should have signage that it is non potable, and it should not be sprayed, come in contact with structures, etc. However, because recycled water is dumped into the open Denver Ditch after dechlorination at a plant near South High School, regulations regarding signage have been circumvented. (this was confirmed by Denver Water at our September meeting). Mr. Trumble is of the opinion, as was Ms. Anderson, that little can be done to amend the procedure of mixing Lowry Landfill waste into the sewage and, consequently, recycled water. The problem is that Metro Waste Water has indemnified all polluters against liability and the City of Denver, which owns the landfill, could be bankrupted by any requirement to clean up the most toxic waste dump. Therefore, it seems that if there ever is to be a “solution”, it would require federal government intervention. Such help could include construction of a new treatment facility for Denver not unlike that built by Aurora. In the mean time, a reasonable alternative would be to plug the emission pipe from the Lowry site. The polluted water there is “never to be moved from the site” so the problem then would be how to contain it there without seepage into the ground and contamination of the surrounding countryside. It may be the role of the INC PARC to further study this serious situation and the policies that contributed to it, as well as make people aware of it and continue to promote ways in which our water can be safer, and the public more informed. --Diana Helper, PARC member

“Although the Shattuck site had a significant impact on the neighborhood, the Overland Park Neighborhood Association never gave up on its goal of reclaiming the natural heritage of the South Platte River,” said Martha Rudolph, environmental programs director of the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment. “We commend them for their vision, persistence and patience.”

The Colorado Natural Resource Trustees are the Attorney General, the executive director of the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment, and the executive director of the Colorado Department of Natural Resources or their designees. The trustees are responsible for litigation of the state’s natural resource damages claims under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA or the Superfund law) and administering funds received from such litigation.
